NAZIS SAY 3 MILLION REDS TAKEN

“Nazis Never Will Capture Moscow,” Soviet Spokesman Says, with Reds Counter Attacking

Declares Advance Slowed Everywhere and Halted In Some Battle Sectors

Bodies of Invaders, Crippled Tanks and Lorries Lie at Approaches to Moscow, Reds Say

By The Associated Press
MOSCOW, Wednesday, Oct. 15.—The Germans crashed toward Moscow from a new direction today in heavy fighting at Kalinin, only fifty-five miles Northwest of the capital, while the Red armies of the center reported they had beaten the Nazis back ten bloody miles over the critical Vyazma sector to the west.

Government advices said the Germans had lost no less than 13,000 men in dead and wounded on the Moscow front on Tuesday alone. A supplement to the midnight communiqué asserted:

Thousands of bodies of German soldiers, crippled tanks, lorries and motorcycle lie in anti-tank pits and at the approaches to our defense.”

In the South, near the Sea of Azov, the early morning Russian communiqué conceded the loss of Tarupol (which the Germans claimed on Oct. 7) but it was the gigantic encirclement drive on Moscow which was of most urgent danger.

Nazis Thrust at Capital
German spearheads thrust at the capital from the South, southwest, West and Northwest—from the sectors of Orel, Bryansk, Vyazma and finally, Kalinin.

The seriousness of this latest threat was obvious from Kalinin's position on the main trunk railroad from Moscow to Leningrad, just east of the natural obstacle of the Valdal hills.

In the raging continuance of the war, the Russian communiqué recorded destruction of eighty-nine German planes on all fronts Sunday to Russian losses of twenty-three, and said that so far eight Nazi planes had been listed as brought down during Tuesday near Moscow alone.

Success of U. S. Lend-Lease Aid Program Is Seen

S. A. Lozovsky, the official Soviet spokesman, declared in an optimistic summary that the German advance had been everywhere slowed down and that in many sectors it had been completely halted.

He asserted, too, that the Red armies west of the capital were far from encircled, as the Germans had claimed, that the Soviet government was remaining in Moscow, and most important of all, that the numerical superiority of the invading forces was now diminishing.

“Fresh millions have risen to the front.”

Health Needs Are Vital to Success Of Defense Drive

Dr. John L. Rice Warns of Effect of Arms Program on Public

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 14.—The national defense drive may not at its foundation unless health needs receive priority over arms requirements. Dr. John L. Rice, health commissioner of New York City and president-elect of the American Public Health Association, said today.

Addressing almost 4,000 members of the organization, he told them replacements for a broken water main, sewer line or heating plant must be obtained, even at the cost of slowing down the building of armaments, if typhoid, dysentery, influenza and other epidemics are to be avoided.

This made priorities for such material imperative, Dr. Rice said.

The national emergency also makes imperative greater public health activities throughout the nation, said the speaker. The war effort has saddled health officials with a burden of fighting possible

House Committee Ends Hearing On Arming of U. S. Merchant Ships

Opponents Denounce Neutrality Charge as “Pussyfooting into the War”

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (P)—The House Foreign Affairs committee concluded hearings late today on legislation to permit the arming of merchant ships after opponents had denounced it as “pussyfooting” into the war.

Chairman Bloom (D-NY) told newsmen he hoped the committee would act on the measure tomorrow so it would be brought up for House consideration the following day. Republican members conceded the committee would undoubtedly approve it.

At the opening of the session Republicans and Democrats engaged in a heated altercation over what the printed record of the proceedings should contain. The Democratic majority finally forced a brief secret session to continue the dis-

Report of Attack On Greer Is Made To Senate Group

British Plane First Sighted Sub and Gave Radio Signal to Destroyer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (P)—The attack on the U. S. Destroyer Greer by a submarine off Iceland last month took place when the Greer went in search of a submarine whose presence was reported to it by a British plane, a report from the Navy disclosed tonight.

The report was sent to the Senate Naval Committee and made public by Chairman Walsh (D-Mass.).

The report included a statement by Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, which said that the Greer, while en route to Iceland with United States mail, passengers and some freight, “was informed by a British plane of the presence of a submerged submarine about ten miles directly ahead.”

“This British plane,” Stark's statement continued, “continued in the vicinity of the submarine until 1052 (10:52 a. m.) when she departed.”

Prior to her departure at 1032 she dropped four depth charges in the vicinity of the submarine.

Greer Locates Submarine

“Acting on the information from the British plane the Greer proceeded to search for the submarine and at 0929 she located the submarine directly ahead by her underwater sound equipment.”

The Greer proceeded then to trail the submarine and broadcasted the submarine's position. This action, taken by the Greer, was in accordance with her orders, that is, to give out information but not to attack.

The Greer maintained his contact until about 1248. During this period (three hours, twenty-eight minutes), the Greer maneuvered so as to keep the submarine ahead.

“At 1240 the submarine changed course and closed the Greer.”

The disturbance of the surface and the change in color of the water marking the passage of the submarine was clearly distinguished by the Greer.

Sub Fired Torpedo

“At 1248 an impulse bubble (indicating the discharge of a torpedo by the submarine) was sighted close aboard the Greer.”

“At 1249 a torpedo track was sighted crossing the wake of the Greer.”

Attorney General Biddle Opens Way For Bergdolt To Gain His Freedom.

Most Publicized Draft Dodger of World War No. 1 Seeks Parole

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (P)—Attorney General Biddle opened the way to freedom from military prison today for Grover Cleveland Bergdolt, most publicized draft dodger of the World War.

Bergdolt is in the United States disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kas., serving terms of five and three years for desertion and escape from the army. He has served more than one-third of the total sentence, imposed by a court martial, and would be eligible for parole except for some old indictments still pending. The indict-

U. S.-ARGENTINA SIGN TRADE PACT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (P)—The United States and Argentina tonight signed at Buenos Aires a reciprocal trade agreement—the first comprehensive commercial arrangement between them since 1853—designed to improve trade relations during the present emergency and afterward.

It is the twelfth trade agreement to be concluded with the American Republics and will go into effect provisionally November 15, entering into full force thirty days after exchange of ratifications.

Subject to certain special provisions, it will remain in force for three years and may continue in force indefinitely thereafter.

Under it, Argentina grants concessions to the United States on 127 products which in 1940 accounted for about thirty per cent of the total United States exports to Argentina—about $32,000,000 out of $106,000,000.

These concessions take the form of reductions in tariffs or agreements not to raise tariffs.

Many Products Included
Included are fresh apples, pears, raisins, prunes, tobacco, motor vehicles and parts, automatic refrigerators certain items of electrical machinery and apparatus, agricultural and industrial machinery, office appliances and forest products.

Argentina, in return, gets reductions in duties or assurance of the continuation of existing tariffs on eighty-four products which in 1938 and 1939 accounted for some ninety-

Secretary of War Stimson was said to have inquired recently whether any charges were pending against Bergdolt, inasmuch as the prisoner had asked for a parole when investigation disclosed the old cases. Biddle decided to ask their dismissal in federal court at Philadelphia, in view of the fact that there is no intention to prosecute further.

War department officials declined to discuss any phase of the Berg-

Convoy System Is Proving Success, Britain Declares

Not One Ship Has Been Lost to German Submarines Since Sept. 15

BY DREW MIDDLETON

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Oct. 10 (Delayed) (P)—Not a single ship has been lost to German submarine attack since the United States announced its decision on Sept. 15 to convoy Lease-Lend goods as far as the waters of Iceland, British naval sources said today.

This is in spite of the fact that two weeks ago informed persons here believed the Germans were starting a great new U-boat campaign equal to that of last March and April.

Cautiously, however, these sources point out that the present “quiet period” since Sept. 16 may be nothing more than a “period in which crack U-boat commanders and crews are resting before returning to the shipping lanes for widespread attacks.”

Therefore they see no cause for complacency in the present position, even though there is great satisfaction in the safe passage of several large convoys in the last few days.

However, there are questions as to whether the German Navy has been expressly forbidden to attack any United States warships or convoys until Adolf Hitler decides whether his armies are in a strong enough position in Soviet Russia to allow him to risk a shooting war with the United States.

The British regard the safe arrival of several important convoys in recent weeks as a technical advantage rather than as a victory, and warn that there must be no relaxation of the relays of patrol bombers which search the seas daily.

So far there have been no reports of any German surface raiders at sea. This possibility is not being overlooked, however, for it is pointed out that the longer Arctic nights will give the Germans a better chance to slip one of their two remaining pocket battleships, the Admiral Scheer and Luetzen, into the North Sea for raids into the North Atlantic.

It is evident that United States assistance in keeping the North Atlantic open will free a great number of British destroyers for service elsewhere. Hence it is likely that the coasts of some occupied countries will be better guarded in the future.

Nazis Continue Paris Executions

Propaganda Posters Connect Roosevelt with Terrorist Wave

VICHY, UNOCCUPIED FRANCE, Oct. 14—Huge government propaganda posters connecting President Roosevelt by implication with the terrorist wave in France were put up in Vichy today as German authorities in Paris executed their seventy-seventh French victim for treason and held without bond on charges of entering the United States without proper documents.

Nazi Embassy Is Silent

The customary penalty for conviction would be deportation, officials explained, but since that probably would be impossible the Norwegians were ordered held in custody for an indefinite period.

Meanwhile, the German embassy maintained a silence on the Busko secret radio station in Greenland and waved aside all inquiries with a curt “no comment.”

Naval officers likewise declined details of the Busko's seizure last month off Greenland, where a secret radio station was discovered.

The Busko arrived under escort of the Bear, former Byrd Antarctic expedition flagship, now in naval service. The Bear did not make the capture, but served only as a convey.

At the same time the high command reported definite annihilation of the Red army's outer belt of fortifications lies a considerable distance from the center of the city.

No one divulged how close the Germans actually were. It was presumed, however, that the defenses might extend fifty miles from Moscow, and there were reports from London that the Germans at one point had gotten within sixty miles of the capital on the west before they were, for the time being, repulsed.

Moscow Heavily Fortified
A military commentator compared the spirit of Moscow's people with that of the population of Paris just before the French capital capitulated in the spring of 1940. However, he added, Moscow is no open city but is fortified heavily, in contrast to Paris, and will be treated accordingly.

With the German success at Vyazma described in Nazi military advices as approaching plain butchery and the position of the remaining Russians at Bryansk seemed little better, the Russians were, nevertheless, said to be throwing all possible reserves into the battle from Lake Ilmen to the Sea of Azov. Ousted President Of Panama Prefers Costa Rica Exile

Dr. Arnulfo Arias Will Be Jailed if He Returns to Republic

COSTRIBAL, CANAL ZONE, Oct. 14 (AP)—Dr. Arnulfo Arias, ousted president of Panama, surrendered to Panama police late tonight after the new Pro-American government of the Republic officially announced a joint agreement that would send him to exile in neighboring Costa Rica.

PANAMA, Panama, Oct. 14 (AP)—Dr. Arnulfo Arias, ousted president of Panama, will go into exile in Costa Rica rather than return here to go to jail. It was announced tonight by the new pro-United States government.

The announcement said:

"In connection with the arrival of Dr. Arnulfo Arias, former president of the republic, at the Port of Cristobal (Canal Zone) early this morning, it is officially announced that he has decided to go to the neighboring republic of Costa Rica, to which the Panamanian government has agreed."

Remains Aboard Steamer

Arias remained aboard the Honduran Steamer Cefalu in Cristobal harbor, Canal Zone police having prevented him from going ashore shortly before the government approval of his Costa Rican exile was announced.

This attempt to return to his country after a week's absence in Cuba and on shipboard immediately set off a series of reports that the new pro-American Panamanian government had chartered an airplane in which to speed Arias and possibly his wife as well to exile in Costa Rica tomorrow.

One high official of the Canal Zone said, "I am in a position to say absolutely that Arias will not leave the Cefalu between now and 7 a.m. tomorrow."

The special Zone police assigned to the ship previously by Brig.-Gen. M. C. Stayer "only for the protection of Arias" stopped the ex-president when he started down the gangplank after a day aboard ship in the harbor.

Appears at Head of Gangplank

Arias appeared at the head of the gangplank with a hat pulled over his eyes.

He had told reporters just before they were put ashore that he was preparing to confront the Panamanian police of the new regime, which has expressed determination to throw him in jail on his return for leaving his country without notice.

Arias complained over the intervention of the Canal authorities, who wield absolute police control over the Zone.

Earlier in the day Arias had waved aside a Panamanian emissary who offered a resignation for his signature and he refused to reiterate his renunciation of politics as carried in a statement he made in Havana.

Panamanian police posted at all exits from the Canal Zone were withdrawn after U. S. Officials decided to keep Arias on shipboard overnight at least.

The Germans said that a number of civilians were killed or wounded as the British bombed several Western German localities.

By daylight Beaufort aircraft of the coastal command attacked German supply ships in low clouds and rain off the Norwegian coast, hitting two and forcing the crew of each plane to take to the boats, the air ministry said.

It was learned in London tonight that a fourth German supply ship was hit by a torpedo from a Beaufort in another attack off the Norwegian coast.

The daylight attackers ran a gauntlet of anti-aircraft and Messerschmitt cannon fire but the air ministry said no planes were lost.

Red Armies Urged To Become English Channel of East

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (AP)—The Moscow radio exhorted Red armies tonight to become "the English channel" of the Eastern front.

The broadcast was picked up here by CBS from the British radio.

Gen. R. P. Scott Is Candidate for Head Of Civil War Vets

Announces Intentions when Gen. Howell Refuses To Call Reunion

ATLANTA, Oct. 14 (AP)—Without much ado, a ninety-six-year-old Texas veteran of the war-between-the-states declared today he was a candidate for commander of the United Confederate Veterans succeeding Gen. Julius F. Howell, of Bristol, Va., who declined to call the annual reunion.

In announcing his candidacy, Gen. R. P. Scott of Dallas, said, "I have been doing a little of politicking and I expect to be elected."

Gen. Scott declared he didn't much want to be commander, but that he is a firm believer in the fifty-one-year-old slogan, "so long as there are two of us left we will meet each year and shake hands."

Gen. Howell last week said the present reunion, if held, would be illegal. He was overruled by three past commanders, one of whom, Gen. John M. Gaypool of St. Louis, charged Gen. Howell with desiring to be the last commander of the U. C. V.

Gen. Scott, a color bearer during the internece war of the 60's, said "I'd rather have the honor of burying my comrades than be commander, but being the chief won't interfere with that."

Nearly 100 of the 600 survivors of the war are attending the reunion. "I guess," Gen. Scott remarked, "most of them were just contrary enough to come because General Howell wouldn't call a meeting."

Two former slaves were in the audience at the opening session. Simon Phillips of Birmingham, who rode to the war with "fighting Joe" Wheeler's cavalry, and Dr. R. A. Gwynne, who has preached to negro Baptists in the south for more than sixty years.

Colorful Gen. Scott bears marks of his participation in the struggle, a sabre scar on his head, a bullet hole in the chin and a bayonet scar on his arm.

Duke and Duchess Have Eyes Examined

BALTIMORE, Oct. 14 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor had their eyes examined today before the Duke dashed to Washington for a personal conference with Viscount Halifax, British ambassador.

A spokesman for the duke described the visit to Dr. Angus L. McLean as "a routine checkup."

Except for the visit to the doctor, the former Wallis Warfield spent the day quietly at Salmonton, the estate of her uncle and aunt, General and Mrs. Henry M. Warfield.

Tomorrow the Windsors will visit the volunteer blood donor project of the American Red Cross, go on to the local headquarters of the British War Relief Society and the British Seamen's Institute.

Thursday will take them to Annapolis for lunch at government house with Governor and Mrs. Herbert R. O'Connor, Admiral and Mrs. Russell Willson and other guests.

They will tour the Naval Academy with Admiral Willson, academy superintendent, as guide.

On Friday the royal couple will motor to Washington for luncheon at the British embassy, stopping en route to visit two Maryland CCC camps.

They will go to the Virginia home of a friend of the Duchess for the weekend before returning to Washington to take a Sunday midnight train for New York.

Conference Held On Long-Standing Boundary Dispute

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 14 (AP)—Representatives of Washington and Frederick counties conferred today on the long-standing boundary dispute that has caused residents in two sections to receive yearly tax bills from both counties.

It was decided that county surveyors of both counties, Edward Shindel of Washington, and Frank Rothenhofer of Frederick, should call a meeting to settle the dispute and report back to another session of the commissioners.

Residents of the Blue Ridge Summit section in Northern Frederick county and the Weverton section in the Southern part complained that tax statements were being sent them by both counties due to uncertainty as to where the border line was located.

Stewart Bushong, attorney for Washington county commissioners, accompanied Shindel, and the Frederick county board of commissioners attended with Rothenhofer.

Czech Athletic Group Dissolved

Sokol Accused of "Romantic Adventures against Germany"

BERLIN, Oct. 14 (AP)—Germany's new ruler in Prague formally dissolved today the widespread Czech sports and nationalist organization, Sokol, and accused its members of "romantic adventures against Germany."

The broadcast was picked up here by CBS from the British radio.

The dissolution, ordered by Reinhard Heydrich, recently-appointed Reichsprotektor for Bohemia and Moravia, said leaders of Sokol were supporting illegal resistance to Germany and planning ways to wreck "cooperation between the German leadership in the protectorate and the Czech populace."

This was an outgrowth of the so-called treasonable plot which the Germans say they have put down in recent weeks with the execution of more than 150 Czechs and other repressive measures. Twelve were shot or hanged today.

German sources said recent trials in old Czechoslovakia had brought out the Sokol connection with Czech resistance.

Sokol has branches in many countries.

A purge of the only legal party in the protectorate, the Czech Union group, also was reported, with 1,200 members ousted for conducting themselves in a manner contrary to the political principles laid down by Emil Hacha, German-approved president of Bohemia-Moravia.

FARMERS ARE TOLD TO PLAN CATTLE FEEDING CAREFULLY

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 14 (AP)—Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, advised Maryland farmers today to plan their cattle feeding schedules carefully to prevent slumps in milk production or slowing down in growth of meat animals resulting from depleted pastures.

Dr. Symons said the prolonged drought has burdened farmers with additional problems in meeting demand for increased production of commodities most needed in the defense program. He disclosed that dairymen and stockmen have been forced to begin using silage at an early date and predicted they would also find it necessary to feed more heavily of grain feeds to keep production from dropping off.

"The problems are not confined to the present or the immediate future," Dr. Symons declared. "Feed that is being used now might have served to carry the stock in the late winter and early spring if pastures had carried the load at this time."

He argued that in each instance the editorials were addressed to the newspaper's readers and not to the courts.

Allen Ashburn, counsel for the California courts, asserted that it was enough to show that there was "a reasonable tendency to affect further action in the case, the reasonable tendency" rule being "historic in its application."

The California courts, he asserted, took cognizance of the Times' power in Los Angeles and its circulation.

Landing, flyers made their way to the mounds, finding two bottle tops and a 1928 Portuguese coin, which might have belonged to Smith, who had been in Brazil. They found no more notes, and no evidence that Smith ever found the hut, which belonged to a trapper and had been occupied recently, although it was deserted when the Army fliers were there.

William Power Maloney, special assistant to the attorney general, said that Burch testified before the grand jury which indicted him that he received $10,000 from Karl Kapp, former German consul at Cleveland, but thought the money was collected from American citizens.

Maloney said Burch bought a large number of books and pamphlets and distributed them under the direction of Kapp.

Want Act Amended

"Ignorance or mistake in the exercise of that power, no less than a calculated abuse, constitutes a threat to the AFL since there is no appeal provided for from decisions in representation or unit cases. Therefore, it is incumbent upon the AFL to persist in its efforts to have the Wagner Act amended in accordance with its proposals now pending before Congress."

The report said the amendments were designed to protect craft union bargaining rights and to provide for court review.

The resolution protested against decisions of the present board which have lumped employees of all crafts into a single bargaining unit in specific plants.

Earlier, the convention called on attorney general Francis Biddle to dismiss any members of his anti-trust division guilty of giving unequal treatment to labor officials and employers in anti-trust cases or of receiving pay for articles written on information obtained in government employ.

Ask Probe of Arnold

The resolution asked him to determine the truth of reports:

"That the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, under direction of Thurman Arnold, has accorded unequal treatment to labor officials accused under the anti-trust statutes in requiring them to be fingerprinted and provide bail, while in no case was an employer so treated."

The resolution also asked dismissals if an investigation disclosed that "articles were written and money received for the writing of these articles from private sources—the budget and content of which was obtained in the service of the United States government and through its processes by the assistant to the attorney general, Thurman Arnold."

The recommendation was made in a report on "labor and the anti-trust laws" section of the AFL's Executive Council report. And was read by John P. Frey, committee secretary.

"Your committee is informed that a special committee has been appointed by the Executive Council to present this part of its report to the president of the United States. We recommend approval of this procedure."

The report contained a criticism of what it termed "the true anti-union aims of the anti-trust division, headed by Thurman Arnold," and of organized labor's grave concern over "Mr. Arnold's lobbying, writing and speech-making activities which are enthusiastically backed by the reactionary press."

Two More Cases Of Paralysis Reported

BALTIMORE, Oct. 14 (AP)—Dr. C. H. Halliday, department of health epidemiologist, said he received reports of two cases of poliomyelitis in Baltimore city today, the only new paralysis victims in Maryland in three days. The reports brought the year's total to 217—126 of them in the counties and ninety-one in Baltimore.

It was learned in London tonight that a fourth German supply ship was hit by a torpedo from a Beaufort in another attack off the Norwegian coast.

The daylight attackers ran a gauntlet of anti-aircraft and Messerschmitt cannon fire but the air ministry said no planes were lost.

Editorial Rights Will Be Reheard By Supreme Court In Newfoundland

Controversy of Los Angeles Times Is again Taken under Advisement

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (AP)—For the second time within twelve months the Supreme Court took under advisement today the controversy between the Los Angeles Times and the California courts over a newspaper's right to comment on a court action after a jury had reached a verdict.

The case was argued first in October 1940 without a decision, and the justices announced on the last day of the spring term that they would hear re-arguments this fall.

At issue are editorials praising a jury verdict against twenty-two sit-down strikers, another asserting that a trial judge would make a "serious mistake" if he granted probation applications of two men convicted of assaults on non-union workers, and a third discussing political "bossism" after conviction of a woman politician in an attempted bribery case.

The newspaper and L. D. Hotchkiss, its managing editor, were convicted of contempt of court by the Los Angeles Superior Court on the grounds that such editorials might affect judicial consideration of pending motions for new trials or applications for probation. They contended today through Attorney T. B. Cosgrove that all the cases had reached finality when the juries had been seated.

Comment after the verdict, Cosgrove said was "a proper exercise of free speech and a free press" as guaranteed by the constitution.

He argued that in each instance the editorials were addressed to the newspaper's readers and not to the courts.

"If I can't find a house, will try to come back to ship. Weather sieving thermometer dropping—am afraid to stay in ship for fear of freezing while asleep. T.H.S."

On a second trip, the Army fliers began a search from the air in the direction Smith had written he would walk. A few miles from his plane, they discovered a line of rock and of stock mounds pointing north westerly, and nearby small butts of trees.

Allen Ashburn, counsel for the California courts, asserted that it was enough to show that there was "a reasonable tendency to affect further action in the case, the reasonable tendency" rule being "historic in its application."

The California courts, he asserted, took cognizance of the Times' power in Los Angeles and its circulation.

A Strike Question That Should Be Settled

A QUESTION of importance not only to this community and state but also to the nation at large is likely to have its first legal test in Maryland, namely, whether strikes may be permitted by state, county and municipal employees.

According to information released by Editorial Research Reports, the Maryland State Legislative Council has begun the preparation of a bill for submission to the next legislature forbidding such strikes. Similar proposals are expected to come before the legislatures of other states when they meet, but as Maryland is expected to have a special session of its General Assembly to act on income tax and other pressing matters, this will likely be included and thus the state will probably have the first whack at this troublesome question.

A review of the situation respecting the question as given by the authority mentioned, some angles of which have already had presentation in these columns, is of local interest.

Most authorities outside the ranks of organized labor have long agreed that government employees have no right to strike under any circumstances. This belief, rather than forbearance by legislatures and city councils largely accounts for the failure to put anti-strike laws on the statute books. However, the civil service rules of many jurisdictions do require an absolute pledge not to strike from prospective policemen, firemen and other applicants for jobs directly related to the public safety.

The National Institute of Municipal Law Officers recently completed a comprehensive survey of court decisions, opinions of state attorneys general and opinions of city attorneys on the questions (1) whether cities could legally enter into collective bargaining agreements with organizations of their employees; (2) whether employee organizations could resort to strikes to enforce such agreements. The Institute's report answered each question with an emphatic "No."

The report quoted with approval a statement made by President Roosevelt in 1937:

"All government employees should realize that the process of collective bargaining, as usually understood, cannot be transplanted into the public service. Militant tactics have no place in the functions of any organization of government employees."

The National Civil Service Reform League concurs in the stand of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers. The League's committee on employ relations recently stated that striking civil service workers should be ousted from their jobs "with loss of all benefits that the merit system implies." The committee held, however, that legislation setting up machinery for settlement of employee grievances and establishing methods of conciliation and mediation was far superior to restrictive legislation seeking to outlaw employee organizations or strikes.

The CIO union of State, County and Municipal Workers of America, in biennial convention at Lansing, Mich., two weeks ago, amended its constitution to sanction strikes by government employees after all other methods of attaining their objectives have failed. In support of its stand, the union quoted from another part of President Roosevelt's 1937 statement which said that the desire of government employees for fair wages and working conditions and for grievance machinery was "basically no different from that of employees in private industry."

In view of union activities, and of the factors of public safety, health and convenience involved, the question is one that should be settled definitely as soon as it can be brought to a head. It was supposed to have been settled way back at the time of the Boston police strike attempt, but there has been such a vast change in labor relations and laws affecting them since that a resettlement appears in order. The sooner it can come the better.

National Defense Getting Nowhere

THINGS are getting so all-fired cockeyed of late that the newspapermen who handle the news for a living don't even dare hazard a guess on what's next.

Uppermost in the minds of nearly everyone, of course, is the war and the multiplicity of events growing out of the war. One hears and reads so much about national defense, intervention, isolationism and so on, that there's little time to discuss other happenings.

John L. Lewis and William Green have both promised to go along with the defense and Aid-to-Britain program, but AFL unions and CIO unions are at each others throats all over the country, more and more thousands are being forced out of their jobs by strikes in key industries and the defense program is getting nowhere.

One hundred thousand automobile workers will be laid off by next week, manufacturers say, if a strike of a few thousand workmen in the Midland Steel Products Company at Cleveland is not settled. The company makes automobile frames for cars and a shortage of frames is even worse than a shortage of gas. The frame shortage is real, the gas shortage is phony.

The Spicer Manufacturing Company, Toledo, O., makes seventy per cent of the transmissions used in army tanks. Employees of the Spicer Company are CIO unionists. A subsidiary of the company at Hillsdale, Mich., which makes other parts for tanks, is an AFL outfit, so the CIO union is on strike and Uncle Sam's production of tanks is in danger.

In England powerful factors are getting sore at us because we are not doing more to help win the war and in Russia there are increasing signs that the Russians are not doing much cheering about the way both Britain and the United States are performing.

That is not to criticize anybody, not to venture any opinions, but it may be pointed out that the situation is not unlike the day when Nero fiddled and Rome burned.

Army Staff Work All Important

MUCH of Germany's success is due to superior staff work. Nearly all experts say that the German staff job in the invasion of The Netherlands, Belgium and France last year was practically perfect. The army knew what it would meet. It knew what help it could expect from fifth columnists. It had a schedule which it maintained at any cost. Its only mistake was in believing that French resistance would be greater.

According to an official British report, Bomber Command, which has just been published, much of Germany's success may have been due to poor co-ordination of the British and French armies. The British declare in the report that Gamelin, who was in supreme command, refused to allow them to use their heavy bombers against German troop concentrations on German soil. He was afraid of injuring civilians.

The British could not use their most effective heavy bombing planes, they maintain, until the Germans began to move, and the planes were far less effective against columns than they would have been against masses of soldiers.

During the winter preceding the invasion of France, there was so little fighting that the war was called a phony war. It was during that time of action that the Germans worked out their staff problems in maneuvers and the British and French apparently failed to decide what use to make of the heavy British bombers, one of their most effective weapons.

While they did not repeat the World War mistake of dividing the command, they apparently did not do the staff job necessary to the most effective use of unified command.

Gamelin may have feared reprisals, but he should have known from the fate of Warsaw in the fall of 1939 that the Germans would not spare civilians and could not be trusted to reciprocate a sparing by the British and French. It is a sorry story, but it tends to prove that no army can be better than its staff.

Harold Has a Tough Week

SECRETARY ICKES has just had a hard week. First, a United States district judge held that the Aluminum Company of America is not a monopoly, trust or trade restrainer. Secretary Ickes decided long ago, though, that the company was a monopoly. On that ground he refused to sell federal power to it. That decision is one reason for the country's aluminum shortage.

The next day the British said that they would be glad to return ten or fifteen of the oil tankers that they borrowed from the United States. Secretary Ickes had declared weeks ago that the British had to have the tankers or perish. On this conclusion he based his gasoline rationing order to eastern states. First, the railroads showed that if their 22,000 tank cars were used there would be plenty of gasoline in the East, then the British said they did not need all the tankers.

In the parade of the genial secretary's misfortunes, things never seem to come singly. When he has a bad week he really has a bad week. It was bad enough for an American judge to decide against him, but when the British government put him back on his heels it must have been nearly too much.

But surely this will not stop Harold's quest for evils to correct. He'll find some more, even if he has to look in Washington for them.

The typewriter is certainly a lethal weapon in the hands of a communiqué writer—it having shot down more enemy planes than all machine guns combined.

"As I pointed out last week," remarks the great swivel-chair military analyst, secure in the knowledge that no one remembers.

Stranger in the Street

BY MARSHALL MASLIN

As I came late down my street, deserted save for me and the sound of my footsteps, suddenly I felt a presence near and looked swiftly around . . . And there, leaning gracefully against a wall, half-hidden in the shadow of a tree, stood a figure I swear had not been there an instant before.

He said, "Good evening," and I noticed that his voice was deep and strong. And instantly I knew that it was, in truth, a GOOD evening because he had made it so. There was half a moon above us and a street lamp shone at the next corner. In those two lights I saw his face and it seemed to me that there was sweetness about his mouth but unapproachable sorrow in his half-hidden eyes.

I asked, "Are you a stranger in these parts?" And he replied, "No, I have known you all your life. I have been your friend for years. You remember me well enough, although sometimes you think you have forgotten me . . . I know all that you do. I know all that you think and hope for and dream. I know you more intimately than any man or woman on earth. I know the mistakes you have made. I know the times you knew the right thing to do and did not do it. I know the times you have been afraid and the times you have been bold."

"I know your wealth. I know your poverty. I know your impatience and your endurance. I know the difference between the man you think you are and the man you are, between the being you intend to be and the man you are sure to become. I know your excuses and your defiance, your humility and your scorn, your integrity and your shame."

"I know what life does to you and what you do to life. I know your sorrow and your peace. I know your petulant waywardness and I know that mystical compass within you that never completely betrays your faltering steps."

The night wind blew, cool and comforting, upon me and I felt at ease with this figure that spoke so confidently about me and my ways. "And who might you be?" I asked him courteously. And he smiled and whispered: "I am that Compass itself. I am the Conscience of every man—and I am YOUR Conscience, too."

One thousand words, Mr. President, not words, to stem the tide of defense strikes.

King of the Jungle Lets the Queen Do the Work, Then Claims Spoils

Bill Arthur Relates Hunting, Photo-Taking Experiences in Africa

The king of the jungle lets the queen do the work and then steps in and claims the "lion's share," according to Bill Arthur, of 911 Ridgedale avenue.

Arthur knows whereof he speaks when it comes to lions and other wild beasts of Africa. He has the goods to prove it, not the least of which is the head and hide of one of the largest lions ever shot by a white man.

This Cumberlander is just back from South Africa, where he did some big game hunting with both gun and camera as a sideline to selling and serving steam shovels and various other excavating equipment. He is service engineer for the Henschel Corporation of Milwaukee, Wis., and for the past twelve years has been traveling through Europe, Asia and Africa for his firm.

Will Speak Tonight

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, Arthur will show motion pictures of South African animal life and other scenes at the Community hall of Grace Methodist church, Virginia Avenue and Second street, accompanying the showing with a commentary on his experiences. The program, to which the public is invited without charge, will replace the regular mid-week sermons at the church.

Arthur went to Africa after traveling through nearly all of Europe, witnessing World War II at first hand.

In an interview at his home last night, he said his observations of jungle life were refreshing after seeing the man-made chaos of Europe.

Pressed for details of his European observations, the engineer said he was not at liberty at this time to speak or publication concerning these matters.

As to the habits of lions, Arthur gave an interesting account of their hunting technique, pointing out that the female of the species is really deadly than the male. The male waits till his mate kills game, then rushes in and takes the best part of the carcass, perhaps letting the female claw off a small hunk, he related.

The engineer also marveled at the strategy shown by a "pride," or family, of lions in attacking a herd of antelope.

Cause Stampede of Antelopes

Several of the lions take up strategic positions at intervals down and from the antelopes, while one of the pride takes his station on the opposite side of the herd, where the wind will carry his scent to them. Then, this lone lion roars, paws the ground and otherwise frightens the antelopes into a mad stampede toward the trap so cunningly set for them.

As the frightened animals rush headlong down the jungle trail, the lurking lions jump directly at their heads, and the impact throws the antelopes head over heels to the ground, frequently breaking their necks or backs, or at least stunning them enough for the lion to jump up on him while he is asleep.

Watch Is Maintained

As protection against such animals, camps generally build an encircling barrier of briar-studded brush, through which lions especially dislike to travel, keep a fire going constantly during the night and maintain a watch.

Another interesting fact recounted by this world-traveler was that tools such as axes and picks used by a native crew in the jungle must be cached high in a tree. He explained that if they were left where lions might get at them, the man seen on the handles would lead the animals to chew the wooden parts to bits.

Describes Deadliest Reptile

Concerning snakes, Arthur told of the black mamba, which he said is the deadliest reptile known to man. One was shot by a member of his party while on a trek through the jungle, he said.

The black mamba generally is about seven feet in length, and unlike many snakes, strikes high on a man's body, frequently at the jugular vein, by rearing more than half its length off the ground. Its bite means sure death to the white man, but the native Zulus have a mysterious cure for it, according to Arthur.

The interviewer would have been glad to listen to more of the fascinating stories which Arthur had to tell, but he had a deadline to make. He hopes, however, to attend tonight's illustrated lecture at Grace church community hall and to hear more of the experiences of Cumberland's only big game hunter.

Arthur is a native of El Paso, Tex., and lived in the west for many years before marrying a Cumberland girl, the former Miss Zetta Alaire. He established his home here thirteen years ago, but most of that time he has been journeying throughout the world, getting back to America only once every three or four years. His last visit here was in 1938.

Wanted To See Series

The engineer docked in New York from Capetown September 30, and his first ambition was to see the World Series. But other things interfered, and he was forced to cancel these plans.

Asked how he managed to take so many pictures, both stills and movies, of wild animals at close range, Arthur explained that most of them were taken in a closed car in the Kruger game preserve, where the beasts are as wild as anywhere, but are protected by hunters.

Arthur said that the sight and noise of an automobile do not bother most of the animals. It is only when they catch the man scent that they run away or, perhaps, become troublesome. The gas and oil fumes generally disguise the man scent.

Keeps Car Doors Locked

It was amazing, said the engineer, to see the look of bewilderment on the faces of some of the animals, especially lions, on the advent of the car. He displayed a picture showing a huge lion apparently yawning, then explained that it did not mean he was bored or sleepy but was attempting to catch the scent of this peculiar invader of his privacy.

Some of the animals approach the car and catch the man scent on the door handle, which may arouse their curiosity to the point where they will seek to force the door open. For this reason, Arthur said, it is a good idea to keep the doors locked from the inside and to be prepared for any eventualities.

Speaking of the man scent, Arthur related that man-eating lions are generally older ones which have lost their ability to hunt the more agile members of the animal kingdom. They sometimes invade camps, and Mr. Mallin married Miss Lucy Morgan, Lonaconing, in 1905.

Three Divorce Suits Are Filed Here

Three divorce suits were filed yesterday in circuit court.

Cruelty is charged by Mrs. Beatrice McCormick Hook in a petition for a partial divorce from Lawrence E. Hook. The couple was wed November 16, 1936, and separated last Friday, according to the bill of complaint, which asks payment of alimony and counsel fees and a court order to prevent Hook from entering the home at 337 Bedford street or interfering with his wife in any way.

Mrs. Mary Pradisca Lochrie also charges cruelty in a suit for a partial divorce from Thomas C. Lochrie, of Cumberland. Descent is alleged in the suit, which declares the couple was wed July 22, 1932, and separated in July, 1936. Restoration of her maiden name is sought by Mrs. Pradisca.

The suits were all docketed by Edward J. Ryan, attorney.

Charges against McKenzie Are Dismissed

Charges were dismissed in trial magistrate court at the request of the owner of the car, Robert E. Wilson, Williams road, against Norwood H. McKenzie, Mt. Savage, who was charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

McKenzie was arrested Saturday morning at 1:35 o'clock on Baltimore street by Lieut. James E. Van.

Magistrate Bruce said that McKenzie took Wilson's car out of the Celanese lot and went for a ride.

BABY FACE

Love Is an Elusive Thing. It Eluded Even Old Aunt Elspeth—Until a Photographer's Camera Out the Truth

By PATRICIA REILLY

Like a startled sparrow, Aunt Elspeth looked up from her embroidery, bright eyes challenging, to whack you on the skull with my thimble—and don't think I couldn't still do it as well as I did when camera clicked. Slumbering hostility you were a boy!" she warned. "It's dredged itself up from the depths beyond me. A grown man, with a sick wife and a little baby, playing around with lights and cameras he can't afford and a hundred little gimeracks that go with them!"

Jim grinned, abashed. "The Star has an amateur contest, Aunt Elspeth. I suppose you wouldn't like it if I won the $250 first prize?"

"Not with my picture, you won't!"

wells of her eyes. Her thin lips stretched tightly.

"Jim Spencer, I've a good mind to whack you on the skull with my thimble—and don't think I couldn't still do it as well as I did when the prim Elspeth said with asperity. "It isn't dignified, in the first place. In the second, you could be doing better things than playing like a child!"

Her thin lips stretched tightly.

"You mean learning to take care of little Barbara while Melinda is ill, don't you?" Jim guessed, his face clouding. "I wasn't fooling old Aunty Elspeth stood out in high relief, her black taffeta showing little, blazelike high lights. Every plane and wrinkle in her face stood out. At her knee, little Barbara seemingly sprouted from the pile of yarn, the baby face alive and filled with awe and love, looking up into the old woman's face.

Strangely, Aunty Elspeth's face was lighted with a warm, loving glow, too, as she looked at the little girl.

"Everything falls on me," his aunt said ominously, but without any distinct originality of thought. "You made me to come here and take over Melinda's duties for you—and then waste good time and money taking undignified pictures when I'm not looking!" She went back righteously to her fine work.

Jim frowned for a moment and then silently and almost automatically wound the spool on his camera forward. He went out of the room.

Aunt Elspeth was a hard nut to crack. She hated babies, even 2-year-old Barbara, her own great-niece. Yet she was an unfailing help in a tight spot like now, with Melinda laid up with a touch of neuralgia. Barbara loved the grim, spare old lady, but Aunt Elspeth seemedly had no spark of affection to return.

"Your old Aunt Elspeth is going to take a horsewhip to your daddy one of these fine days. Barbara," he grinned at the interested but uncomprehending child as he went into the nursery and sat down on the padded window seat.

"Toys, dadda!" the young lady pronounced knowingly, her exploring fingers touching the shiny chromium of the camera. Jim patted her head and screwed a fresh flash bulb into the camera attachment. Then he picked up the baby and took her into the living room to see her Aunty Elspeth. Aunty was frowning.

Barbara toddled across the room when she had been set down and grasped at the old lady's taffeta skirt. Jim saw the making of a picture. Without thinking, almost, he set his exposure meter, adjusted the range and pressed the bulb release. The old lady picked the child up, her face a frozen mask of repressed vengeance as she glared at her nephew.

"I swear that someday I'll take the ax from the tool room and smash that informal contraption to pieces so small you could put them in a hollow tooth, Jim Spencer," she said in a tight voice. "Lord knows how I'm being punished for my sins, being burdened with a sick girl, a little brat and a doll of a nephew!"

Jim retreated, wisely. There was not a bit of use in getting Aunt Elspeth too riled. She had her own ways of taking retributive steps if she got pushed too far, and she used them!

He went down into the tiny darkroom he had fashioned under the steps leading to the furnace room and began developing the film from his camera.

worry begin to form. If she refused to release the picture, his work would be useless.

"But Aunty Elspeth—" he weakly protested.

"I will indeed!" the old woman said menacingly. "The least he could do was put down our names under it. How does anybody know who we are?"

Resistance Held Quite Necessary In Game of Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A couple of weeks ago this column published a letter from a girl who couldn't understand why the boy friend hung up every time she called him on the phone. He was literally smothered with her attentions; her sweetness had grown as nauseating as pounds and pounds of oversweet candy.

That girl's letter has evoked interesting response from other girls who have received nothing in return for loyal affection but bitter experience. The girl whose letter is published today apparently gave enough of herself to put on guard girls who have not learned the bitter lesson that "resistance" is half the battle of this game we call love.

"I've just read your letter from a girl whose boy friend hangs up whenever she calls, and cannot resist the temptation of telling you of my similar experience," the letter states. "I was so deeply in love that I lost all sense of pride and propriety. I waited for his calls, hung on every word, allowed him to kiss and fondle me, and waited for him to tell me how deeply he loved me.

Gave Up Other Friends

"For two years I saw him intermittently, when he felt like seeing me. Where he was concerned I had no pride. I gave up all other boy friends because I was so much in love with him. I was slow to realize but in those two years he took me to one fifteen-cent movie and bought me one drink of hot chocolate. The rest of the time we walked. He went to dances with me because I had the tickets. He told me of football games he had seen; I imagined he went alone.

Shoved Outside

"One night he stopped and asked me to go to his home. Although it was Christmas and my family were waiting dinner for me, I chucked the home date and agreed, thinking he wanted me to meet his family. When we got to his house, a woman's voice (his mother's) called: 'What are you doing here? I thought you were going to —'s house.' He shoved me out of the door. I was stunned. For a moment I didn't realize that he had taken me to his home only because he thought the family would be away.

"When I saw him at the place where I was employed after school, I was in seventh Heaven, because I knew he would walk home with me through the park.

"Coming from the movies one night with my mother, we stepped back to allow a car to make a turn and there he was in evening clothes with a lovely girl beside him, starting out on a swell date. My heart broke, but still I kept caring for him, never realizing that it was only my kisses and my submission he was after.

Large and Small Telephone Concerns Traded by Owners

St. Louis, Oct. 14. (AP)—The $500,000 southwestern Bell Telephone Company, is not above a bit of old-fashioned horse-trading.

"Neither is Lee Hayes, independent telephone man for thirty years, who operated a 100-telephone exchange at Barling, Ark.

Before Southwestern Bell could provide telephone service for Camp Chaffee, new army training center near Fort Smith, Ark., it had to acquire the Barling franchise and exchange. Hayes didn't feel like retiring, so Southwestern Bell made him a proposition.

"Take a look about our system," company officers told him. "Pick out any exchange about the size of yours and we'll make a clean swap."

After visiting Tuckerman, Ark., Hayes decided he would be willing to accept the 88-telephone exchange there.

Company officers were reluctant about the whole thing, but they needed the Barling exchange. They announced today the deal had been completed and Hayes would take over the Tuckerman exchange Nov. 1. It was an outright swap with no cash involved.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

LOUISE AND Toby and Hallie and Eric talked excitedly all that evening about the new plans the Adamses must make. But Hallie's enthusiasm for plans was forced when they got beyond the week that was coming in Vermont. She knew that Eric was going to borrow from Toby to pay their expenses to and from East Lynbrook and that she would have to see that the borrowed money was repaid from a salary that would mean slim going in New York, but she was too happy to worry about it. A new kind of serenity possessed her.

Win had left immediately after dinner, but his presence was there in the room still, like a warm thing. She fell down in the bottom of her heart that everything was going to be all right now. The coming of a big brother into their life—she tried to accustom herself to thinking of Win as her brother, too—was the steady thing they needed.

It was something psychological. Family, relatives, these were part of the estate of marriage. One was welded into family life. She and Eric would not be drifting youngsters with no ties.

For the first time in her marriage, Hallie dared to think of what it would mean to have children. But she rejected the sweetness of the thought at once. They couldn't have children until they had a future with some sort of security.

Perhaps when they came back to New York she could get a job.

Sitting there in Toby's big chair with her feet tucked under her and tail swirling about her, she began to dream. If she could save her salary for a year . . .

Louise was saying, "You'll probably want to take this apartment back. If you'd just give us a month to look around for another place—"

Eric said, "Don't be in a hurry. Hallie and I will find a little place for a while." Even then he wasn't telling their friends how small his salary was.

Hallie said, "Come on, Eric. We'll have an awful lot to do if we're leaving Sunday. I'll have to pack and clean house and do a million things."

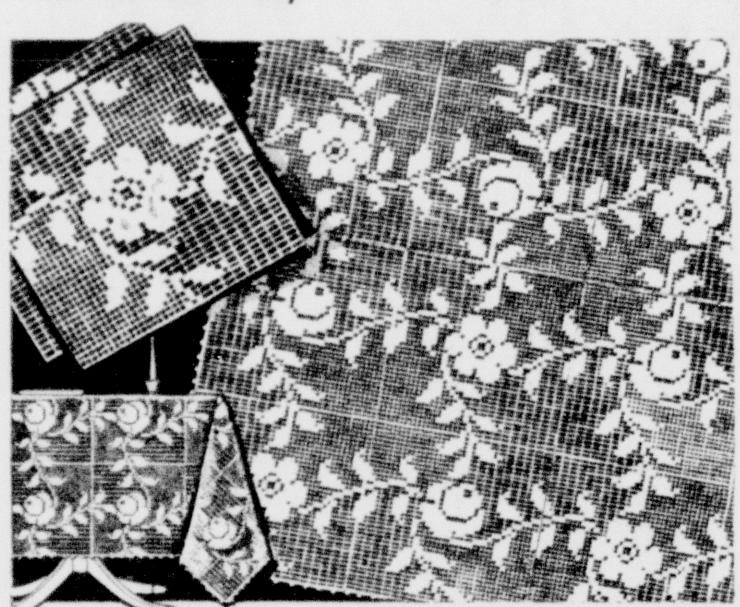

Eric had got up. "Could I have a word alone with you, Toby?" he asked.

Hallie was so ashamed suddenly, she couldn't meet Louise's eyes. She knew what Eric's words would be.

Louise said, "If there's anything you'd like to borrow, Hallie, you may have the pick of my wardrobe. You'll need warm clothes, you know."

"Oh, I've lots," Hallie said arily. Louise knew her better than any-

FOOLISH PELICAN TAKEN PRISONER

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 14 (AP)— Vaughn Bailey caught a migratory pelican because it didn't keep its big mouth shut.

Trying to grab the bird's neck, Bailey circled it only to have the pelican make a grab at his leg.

Finally, it opened its beak in an all-out attack. Bailey put his foot in, held the lower jaw to the ground and tied up the pelican.

Many Problems Crop Up in First Year at College

New Responsibility May Be Interpreted By Youth as Freedom

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

A great many students fail at college, or are very unhappy there, because of earlier home experiences and relationships. The student who did not learn at home to make choices for himself or herself about clothes, friends, money and the like may meet with all sorts of difficulties at college.

Suppose, as often happens, the mother had purchased or selected all the student's clothes, kept them mended, pressed and cleaned. Suppose she had given the youth entering college but little opportunity at home to choose friends. Suppose he never had had an allowance. See what a load of responsibility has suddenly fallen on this youth away from home.

This new responsibility may be interpreted by the youth merely as freedom. If she or he felt hampered in choice of friends and clothes and in the use of money, his new choices and expenditures may prove very unwise. On the other hand, they might have been excellent if opportunities for choices had been afforded this youth earlier with some suggestions and skillful guidance.

Proper Medical Care of Old People Becomes Subject of Special Study

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I am in receipt of a small pamphlet on the "Medical Problems of Old Age," part of the magnificent program which consisted in a review of all human knowledge presented at the two-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the University of Pennsylvania.

The medical care of old people is a subject that from a scientific standpoint has been greatly neglected. Of late, along with all the problems of old age that have been thrust upon us by our increasing age population, it has received some recognition.

Professor Pepper, of the department of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, has been a leader in this work, and devotes several clinics a year to bring to the attention of medical students the intricacies of gerontology, as the science of old age is called.

Peculiarities of Aged

There are many peculiarities of disease in the aged, some of them well-known, others not so well-known even to the otherwise accomplished physician.

The changes in the circulatory system, the obliteration of blood vessels in the body apparent in the skin in the form of patriarchal pallor, are the primary cause of most of the disabilities of age. In the brain these changes lead to forgetfulness, sleepiness, garrulity, "anecdote," as it has been aptly called, and, more serious, many mental aberrations.

Peculiarities not so generally recognized are that old people are just the opposite of children in that they do not stand drugs well—particularly sedative drugs—and they do tolerate surgical operations very well. Certain childish diseases are very likely to attack the aged— whooping cough and appendicitis, for instance—and produce peculiar and distinct clinical pictures.

"Add More Life to the Years"

There is great need for more knowledge of the physiology of old age. We need to know how to improve the habits of old age. That the ones we have are not always the best habits was expressed by Lord Roseberry:

"It is a black moment when the heralds proclaim the passing of the dead, and the great officers break their staves. But it is sad still when it is the victim's own voice that announces his decadence, when it is the victim's own hand that breaks the staff of power. I wonder if generations to come will understand the pity of it."

Our ideal must be, in the words of another Pennsylvania professor, Dr. George Morris Pierson, to "add more life to the years rather than more years to the life."

Questions and Answers

R. W. C.—Is an ounce of sauerkraut juice taken before breakfast as a laxative harmful to a person who has an acid condition of the stomach?

Answer: Sauerkraut juice, like all fruit juices, usually makes a person with acid stomach uncomfortable for a while, but otherwise does no real harm.

Alcohol blended with gasoline makes a satisfactory fuel for automobiles, the Bureau of Standards, department of Commerce, says, but is too expensive for practical use.

Wheeler Opposes Arming of Ships

Senator Plans Determined Fight against Roosevelt Policies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14. (AP)—Returning from a month-long speaking tour through the Middle and Far West, Senator Wheeler (D-Mont) announced here that opponents of administration foreign policy would "make a determined fight" against the pending legislation authorizing the arming of American merchant ships.

The British supply council asserted that aluminum was under strict export control in Britain, and that such exports as Wheeler mentioned would be impossible.

"Our wing leader ordered the squadron to attack and we did—as one man," he said. "The ME's (Messerschmitts) were trying to get at our bombers as we hurtled down on them."

"Immediately we got in range we started pouring cannon shells into them. Very soon we saw several of them going down in flames."

"The first one I attacked went down in flames. Then I had a crack at another. Pieces flew off him as he went straight down into the sea."

A clean skin will disinfect itself.

In his proud Irish brogue he related here how he dived with an Australian squadron into the thick of twenty Nazi Messerschmitts over the French coast.

"This talk about freedom of the seas is sheer poppycock," Wheeler told a press conference. "The last thing Great Britain wants is freedom of the seas."

The Montanan, who has been in the forefront of senatorial battles against administration foreign policy, said that "it is no protection to a merchant ship to put a popgun on it, and that step would only invite attack."

Wheeler said he knew of no reason why President Roosevelt would wish to arm the ships "unless he wants to see an incident develop."

He said there was much dissatisfaction among business men over the priorities program. One radio manufacturer told him, he said, that while he had been unable to buy aluminum in the United States he had received assurances from Great Britain that it could be delivered from that country within three weeks.

The British supply council asserted that aluminum was under strict export control in Britain, and that such exports as Wheeler mentioned would be impossible.

All-Star Concert
Will Open Oct. 29
At State College

Opening Program Will Feature Music by Siberian Singers

FROSTBURG, Oct. 14.—The fifth season of the All-Star concert course at State Teachers college in Frostburg, will bring together the most group of musical entertainers ever presented.

The opening concert on October 29 will present the Siberian Singers, a well known male choir featuring Russian music. All of the singers are from the old St. Petersburg Cathedral choir and are directed by Nicholas Vasileff, a distinguished young musician and an outstanding vocalist.

The second concert, on December 1, will bring to the college Louis Subia, the brilliant young Baltimore pianist who represented the Capitol district in the Federation of Music Clubs' artist contest in Los Angeles this past summer. His performance won high praise from the critics and his recital here will be a high light of the season.

The third concert will be presented by the Instrumental Ensemble, interpreting the Viennese music of Strauss, Brahms, and Dvorak.

Stanley Chapple will give illustrations of modern English composers at the piano in the fourth concert.

The final number of the course will appear at the same time that the Maryland Federation of Music Clubs will be on the campus and a festival program will be given. Maurice Matieson, music director at the college, is in charge.

Hitchens and Edwards, owners of the building at Water and West Main streets, destroyed by fire, were also notified to have a fence placed about the vacant lot to prevent persons from falling over the foundation walls still standing.

Following the broadcast, there was a general discussion with reference to the work already done at outpost 24-B, located on top of Big Savage mountain at the Mountain Inn.

It was reported by Fred W. Boettcher, chief observer of the local ground observation post, that the Frostburg post is scheduled to take part in the third test, which will be held in the near future for the purpose of giving inland stations a

Recovery in Stocks Stalls at Noon And Losses Are Shown at the Close

Transfers Total 435,420
Shares Compared to 485,020 Friday

By BERNARD S. OHARA
NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (AP)—Brief and tentative recovery shifts in the stock market today faded before another wave of apprehension regarding Russia's ability to prevent the taking of Moscow by the Germans.

Although the war picture seemingly became blacker for the Muscovites in the holiday interim, the market encountered no burdensome offerings at the opening and this encouraged enough demand to lift a fair number of stocks fractions to around a point.

The recovery stalled near midday and thereafter the list paced out a slow retreat. Certain coppers, rubbers, and specialties resisted the downward pull.

A closing loss of 3 of a point in the Associated Press 60-stock composite after the rather steep slide last week carried the market to the lowest average levels since July 1 at 41.6.

Transfers were small throughout, totaling 435,420 shares compared with 485,020 last Friday.

As has been true since the first news of the big German drive on Russia, the market paid relatively minor attention to domestic happenings.

Stocks on the outside at the close included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Chrysler, Sears, Roebuck, United Aircraft, Sperry, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Eastman Carbide, Johns-Manville sum, Westinghouse dipped 1% to a 1941 low.

Lower in the curb were Aluminum, Ltd., American Cyanamid, and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Fractionally improved were Brewster Aeronautical, Glen Alden Coal and Humble Oil. Dealings here were 98,000 shares against 96,000 Friday.

The bond market was lightly unsettled by the reappearance of selling orders in the rails and ended with minor gains and losses about evenly divided in the main groups.

Volume was the smallest in about three weeks at $5,070,300 par value, compared with $5,825,700 last Friday, which led observers to the conclusion that the minor reaction was mainly of a technical character.

United States governments were quiet on both the stock exchange and over the counter. Longer term maturities held closely to levels of last week but some nearby maturities backed away slightly.

Programs May Rise and Fall, But One Star of Ether Waves Has No Worries—Lowell Thomas

Ace Radio Commentator Draws Millions of Listeners to Their Loudspeakers

Much of Lowell Thomas's wandering is in the past now; his center of interest is in his New York state farm, where he is shown in these pictures. Even two of his broadcasts every week are aired, upper left, from a private studio in a country club near his farm home. Among his favorite recreations are baseball with the "Nine Old Men," lower left, and riding. He is shown with one of his mounts, upper right. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are seen on the lawn of their beautiful home, lower right.

By CLARK KINNAIRD
Central Press Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—A new broadcasting season having begun, positions among the popular favorites on the air hang in the balance. Autumn, when old programs resume and new programs are launched, is the time when radio reputations are made and unmade.

The program that was a listening habit of millions at summer's advent may be a has-been in October. The Bennys, the Allens, the Bergens, the quizzers, the crooners, et al., never have a good appetite in the autumn, when stars are rising—and falling.

A star shines in the highest radio heavens an average of three seasons. Of the big broadcasting stars of ten years ago only two or three show a larger or undiminished number of listeners in the so-called Crossley surveys. The outstanding example is Lowell J. (for Jackson) Thomas, now in his eleventh year as a year-round voice of America, and the one who, the surveys indicate, has least reason to worry about this autumn's verdicts of the Great American radio jury.

Why?

Damon Runyon, one of the greatest reporters in any media, once wrote of "Tommy" Thomas:

"He is the beau ideal of the radio fraternity, first for his complete artistry and second for his personal magnetism. He is more of a news narrator than anything else, approaching his subject in the manner of a newspaper reporter writing a story with the idea of presenting the facts as entertainingly as possible and without opinion or bias."

"The radio people say that from Thomas they have learned more of what radio can and cannot do than from any other individual. A commentator is, in effect, a man you have invited into your home, and therefore he must use the same tact and good taste on the air he would be expected to exercise if he were actually seated in a parlor talking to decent people. Thomas has a highly developed sense of discretion in that respect."

This isn't something Thomas developed as a broadcaster. It is an innate quality that was in evidence before his words began to be hung upon by millions of listeners. Thomas was made to order for the role of daily visitor to the nation's parlors.

Lowell Thomas was born in Waddington, O. The Thomas family went to Colorado in mining boom days seeking a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. It remained for young Lowell to collect it for chasing rainbows all over the world.

Wanderer

"When I was 11 years old I worked at Cripple Creek," he tells. "Gold miners are a different lot from coal miners or those who work in lead or copper. They are wanderers. Before they are 30 they have been to most parts of the earth. Working with them, I used to listen to their tales. And then I made up my mind I would see the countries they were talking about."

"The first place I made for when I left home was the Klondike. And I've been at it ever since."

The mine boy's longing for travel and adventure was accompanied, fortunately, by a thirst for education. He worked his way around through four universities—Denver, Valparaiso, Chicago and Princeton, as farm hand, furnace tender, cook and waiter, reporter and editor, until he was a Ph. D. Before his college days had ended, his ability as a writer, talker and shrewd manager made it possible for him to make a business of adventure—to start conducting expeditions and profit from them on the lecture platform and in the magazines.

Lawrence of Arabia

It enabled him to get a prize assignment from the Washington government during the first World War—that of recording the history of the conflict as it happened. With a tion of radio and television listeners, newsreel viewers, magazine and book readers and lecture-goers. The lectures are few now, however. His strenuous schedule, plus his desire to spend as much time as possible at his sprawling farm near Pawling, N. Y., bars his acceptance of most of the invitations for personal appearances.

Stanton Asks Change In Maryland Law

BALTIMORE, Oct. 14. (AP)—A recommendation for a change in Maryland law to define assault with intent to murder, ravish or rob as a felony instead of a misdemeanor will go to the legislative council for its consideration.

Police Commissioner Robert F. Stanton said that he had asked Dr. Horace E. Flack of the department of legislative reference to bring the matter to the attention of the council with a recommendation for action by the next session of the legislature.

Reclassification of the offense would permit the police department to make a legal arrest in the absence of a warrant, Stanton explained.

Grass Fires Keep Firemen Here Busy

A series of grass fires and false alarms kept firemen on the run here yesterday. No damage was reported although one fire raged for over three hours before it was brought under control by two fire companies.

East Side company, called to Shriver's hill by a grass fire at 11:20 a.m., was joined by firemen of Central company at 1:15 p.m. Several acres of the hill was burned over before firemen could extinguish the blazing grass and weeds. Both companies returned at 2:30 p.m.

Only twenty minutes of work was required to put out a grass fire in the 500 block of Caroline street. South End fire company answered the call.

Chalky Wright Wins

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (AP)—Chalky Wright, world featherweight titleholder in New York and Maryland, earned a top-heavy decision over Leo Rodak, Chicago lightweight, in a listless ten round bout.

Wright, tough little Los Angeles negro had the fight in hand from the second round on. Rodak, hurt by one of Wright's uppercuts in the second, backpedaled most of the route and managed to tie Wright up in a clinch whenever the negro tried to send home a knockdown wallop. The fighters spent about half the bout in clinches and the 4,000 customers booted as they left the ring.

Wright weighed 127½ and Rodak 133½.

A Twosome with Eleanor Is Great Training Routine

Haugland manfully keeps up as the Peppy Powell dates him.

HOLLYWOOD—A familiar scene in the movies is for boy and girl to come riding on a bicycle along a country road, harmonizing a song. Then they'll dismount on a grassy knoll under a tree, pluck a flower or two, and the first thing you know there's a proposal or at least a kiss.

Eleanor Powell certainly looks the type. Moreover, she can ride a bike one-handed, and she has two big cycles of her own. We went for a ride on 'em the other day.

But when Eleanor hops her bike, there's no meandering along a country lane. Even the palm-shaded side streets of Beverly Hills, near her home, are too quiet.

Like a homing pigeon, Eleanor heads for heavy traffic. Down on Santa Monica boulevard, where the automobiles whiz at you and past you in a steady stream and where buses and street cars add to the confusion—that's where she likes to ride.

The idea of tossing Eleanor about was something different, she thought. She also did a dance with a dog that was quite novel. Now, she declared, the studio wants her to whip up one with pink elephants.

TAKOMA PARK, Md., Oct. 14 (AP)—Prince George's county police and fire officials continued today their investigation of a fire that damaged a part of the two-story J. Enos Ray elementary school, prompted by the discovery of evidence that may have been started by arsonists.

Three teen aged Baltimore youths, held by county police were released today after questioning Sergeant Ralph Brown, who arrested the boys, did not disclose their names now what information had led to their arrest.

The fire broke out early Monday morning, destroying part of the basement and a classroom on the main floor. A milk truck driver told police he had seen a light in the building about two hours before the blaze was reported.

Fire Marshal Herald W. Hirst said candle grease was found on a desk in the basement near where the fire started.

Mrs. Frances Lindahl, school principal, reported to the police that two desks belonging to teachers had been broken open and about $15 stolen.

Pending repairs, the 209 pupils of the Ray school will go to classes in the Takoma Park fire hall.

Lack of Nurses Is Discussed

Special Committee Takes Up Problem Created by Emergency

BALTIMORE, Oct. 14 (AP)—A special committee formed under the auspices of the Maryland State Nurses Association today took up the problem of meeting an emergency caused by an acute shortage of nurses in Maryland hospitals.

Nearly 203 vacancies exist in general nursing positions throughout the state at the present time, the association said.

Directors of schools of nursing and chairmen of several association committees from the special committee known as the Maryland State Nursing Council for Defense.

Aims of the council were expressed in a six-point program:

1. To study the nursing needs and resources of Maryland.
2. To furnish guidance and assistance to those institutions seeking aid.
3. To serve as a bureau for pooling the ideas and problems of the various nursing institutions.

4. To work for an increased enrollment of well qualified nursing students in good schools of nursing.

5. To consider all questions pertaining to the nursing care of patients, including the training and use of subsidiary workers.

6. To provide for professional leadership in the national defense emergency.

The council circulated alumnae associations of nurses, asking their cooperation in urging graduate nurses to return to nursing either on a full time or part time basis. Most nursing schools indicated they would offer refresher courses to those who would.

Barton farm, Pinto; the Wilbur Perrin farm, Flintstone; the Lee Fraze farm, Town Creek; the Marshall T. Mann farm, Little Orleans, and the county home.

McHenry said he and Magruder will check the efficacy of the use of phosphates and lime, the plowing of pasture furrows and the planting of trees to control erosion.

Boy Scout Troops Plan for Roundup

Annual Two-Day Outing Opens Saturday in Savage River Forest

Boy scouts of Potomac council will participate in a roundup Saturday and Sunday in the Big Run Recreation Area in the Savage River forest.

The committee in charge believes this is an excellent time to visit the dam as work has proceeded far enough to show the ultimate size of the project. At the same time many construction details which will later be covered up either by dirt or water can now be viewed.

Arrangements are being made with engineers familiar with the project to be there between 2 and 3 p.m. Saturday to explain it to the boys.

The recreation area contains a large open pavilion, with fireplaces, picnic tables, tested water supply and toilet facilities. Scouts are instructed to bring suitable tentage and plenty of warm bedding and spare clothing. Troops will make their own arrangements about food.

WESTERN MARYLANDERS WILL CONFER WITH ROADS COMMISSION

Representatives of the Confederation of Western Maryland Communities will confer with the state roads commission in Baltimore tomorrow morning relative to several projects the group is backing, it was announced yesterday by Harold W. Smith, secretary of the chamber of commerce and a member of the confederation's board of directors.

The council circulated alumnae associations of nurses, asking their cooperation in urging graduate nurses to return to nursing either on a full time or part time basis. Most nursing schools indicated they would offer refresher courses to those who would.

Associate Judge William A. Huston signed an order assuming jurisdiction of the trust and directing Clarence O. Rizer, trustee, to post bond of $6,000, the estimated amount of the assets of the firm.

The petition asking the court to assume jurisdiction was docketed by C. William Gilchrist and William R. Carscadden, attorneys.

ship starboard to port, distant about 100 yards astern.

"At 1256 the Greer attacked the submarine with a pattern of eight depth charges.

"At 1258 a second torpedo track was sighted on the starboard bow of the Green distant about 500 yards. The Greer avoided this torpedo.

"At this time the Greer lost sound contact with the submarine.

"At 1300 the Greer started searching for the submarine and at 1512 x x x the Greer made underwater contact with a submarine.

The Greer attacked immediately with depth charges."

Stark went on to report that the result of the encounter was undetermined.

He also asserted that the action taken by the Greer was correct in every particular in accordance with his existing orders.

The Greer's brush with the submarine in the North Atlantic has given rise to questions by some opponents of the administration's foreign policy as to whether the Greer actually had been the aggressor.

The report made public tonight was given to the Senate Naval committee by the Navy in response to a resolution asking that a copy of the Greer's log be submitted.

The Navy did not submit the log but Stark said that in his statement he had "tried to present a complete and clear picture of the entire incident to you because there is nothing that the Navy wishes to conceal, except some purely military features."

He added that such omissions would not affect "the complete picture" and that their inclusion might be "useful to an enemy."

The naval committee's report also included questions addressed to Navy Secretary Knox by Walsh and answers proposed by Stark. In these questions and answers it was brought out that the incident took place about 175 miles southwest of Iceland in the path of communication between the American ports and Iceland, and within the zone where Germany announced on March 26 that vessels were subject to destruction.

Stark said in answer to a question that the Greer "had orders from the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet to proceed through the area," with full knowledge of the navy department.

It also was brought out that a British destroyer was about five miles from the Greer when it made one of its depth bomb attacks.

"This British destroyer," Stark related, "had arrived on the scene at 1415 and had asked the Greer if she (the Greer) desired to conduct a co-ordinated search for the submarine. To this question the Greer replied 'No.'"

"The British destroyer stood through the area and disappeared to the southward."

It also was brought out that the navy department has not yet received a copy of the Greer's log for that time.

The original charge against him was evasion of the Selective Service act by failing to appear for a physical examination. He taunted officials with postal cards from scattered points, but Justice department agents caught him in Philadelphia on January 7, 1920.

Bergdolt was court-martialed and sent to prison, but not for long. Within two months, while making a search for a "pot of gold," allegedly hidden in Western Maryland, he persuaded his guards to let him visit his mother in Philadelphia. Once in her home, he evaded the guards, escaped from a window and fled to Canada, thence to England and Germany.

The administration will be ready, the chief executive said, to take on the new $5,985,000 appropriation, which now is pending in the Senate, as soon as it is enacted.

Hot or sweet, swing or torch—it's all the same to her. You call your choice and she delivers. And good, too.

That's Jane Frazee, talented singing actress, who is said to have her best role in Universal's "San Antonio Rose," now at the Liberty theater.

Practically every leading theater in the U. S. and most of the famous hotels and cafes have been included in her engagements. Exclusive night clubs, like Billy Rose's Casa Manana and Ben Marden's Riviera in New York and Chez Paree in Chicago have voted Jane's voice real 24-carat' stuff. Radio shows and top orchestras have squabbled for her services.

Jane, a Duluth, Minn., girl of Norwegian-French ancestry, got her first view of a theater public from behind the footlights of Lyceum Theater, in Duluth, when she was eight years old. Jane, warbling "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" and "My Old Kentucky Home," brought down the house. For this, her first appearance, Jane received $7.50 in cash and "local girl makes good" notices in the newspapers.

DISCUSSION ON ROMANCE

The girls talk about romance in 20th Century-Fox's Technicolor musical, "Week-End in Havana," opening tomorrow at the Strand theater. Alice Faye gives the lowdown to Cobina Wright, Jr., as Carmen Miranda listens in on the conversation. It must be John Payne and Cesar Romero they're discussing.

Caterpillar Interrupts
Alice Faye's Song

Seated on a comfortable pallet of sugar cane stalks, Alice Faye and John Payne were going through the paces on the set of their latest picture for Twentieth-Century-Fox, the technicolor musical, "Week-End in Havana."

Alice and John holds hands and sing to the accompaniment of the new Gordon and Warren tune "Tropical Magic," as they ride along on the little Cuban cart. Grouped around them are Director Walter Lang and his camera crew—everyone concentrates on synchronizing the music and the soft singing of the stars.

But just as Alice hits the chorus, there is a rending scream. Alice makes a dive from the cart and nearly drags unsuspecting John with her.

Amid a welter of queries, Director Lang rushes to help Alice to her feet and inquires, "What's the matter?"

"The wagon is full of bugs," replies Alice, indignantly.

Very upset, the prop-man searches the cart for vermin and finally finds the one very sleepy little caterpillar.

Carmen Miranda and Cesar Romero are also starred in this Twentieth-Century-Fox technicolor musical, which is scheduled to open tomorrow at the Strand theater.

Only three states now provide regular open seasons for trapping beaver, once common in America.

More than 8,000 separate pieces of metal go into a single large airplane engine.

"Honky-Tonk" Reunites
"Boom Town" Players

"Honky-Tonk," which opens tomorrow at the Maryland theater and co-stars Clark Gable and Lana Turner for the first time, brings together several members of the "Boom Town" company. John Conway directed both pictures and Gable starred in both, while Frank Morgan and Chill Wills, feature players in "Honky-Tonk," were also in the cast of "Boom Town."

In addition, both pictures had colorful backgrounds and adventurous dare-devil types. While "Boom Town" dealt with the early days of the oil industry, depicting Gable as a "wild catter" who made and lost several fortunes, "Honky-Tonk" tells of the pioneer days of the frontier west when the rush for gold brought motley characters from all corners of the earth in its train.

Clark Gable and Lana Turner are supported in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production by a stellar cast, including Frank Morgan, Claire Trevor, Albert Dekker, Marjorie Main and Chill Wills.

The plot concerns the efforts of a fast-talking "con" man to take over the city of Yellow Creek. He is temporarily stopped, however, by a girl from Boston who takes him over the hurdles.

Frank Morgan plays the role of Miss Turner's father. Claire Trevor, as "Gold Dust," a frank frontier-woman in love with Gable has an important featured part and Albert Dekker, who was seen with Gable in "Strange Cargo," battles him again in "Honky-Tonk." Comic relief is supplied by Chill Wills and Marjorie Main.

When Bob Steele rides into town tomorrow for a three-day engagement at the Embassy theater in his latest screen hit, "Billy the Kid's Fighting Pals," film devotees will have an opportunity to see not only one of Hollywood's most adept and popular stars, but a keen student of western history as well.

The popular young star of P. R. C. picture is western-born and western-conscious; not only does he play prairie roles, but at the same time he announces that for twenty-odd years of casting western features, the casting agents have been "all wet," his opinion is worth hearing.

From time immemorial," says Bob, "the killers in western pictures have followed the stage pattern of being pictured as dark or swarthy individuals. For some reason, the theater has always conned white people into believing that they are bad guys."

The plot concerns the efforts of a fast-talking "con" man to take over the city of Yellow Creek. He is temporarily stopped, however, by a girl from Boston who takes him over the hurdles.

Frank Morgan plays the role of Miss Turner's father. Claire Trevor, as "Gold Dust," a frank frontier-woman in love with Gable has an important featured part and Albert Dekker, who was seen with Gable in "Strange Cargo," battles him again in "Honky-Tonk." Comic relief is supplied by Chill Wills and Marjorie Main.

When Bob Steele rides into town tomorrow for a three-day engagement at the Embassy theater in his latest screen hit, "Billy the Kid's Fighting Pals," film devotees will have an opportunity to see not only one of Hollywood's most adept and popular stars, but a keen student of western history as well.

The popular young star of P. R. C. picture is western-born and western-conscious; not only does he play prairie roles, but at the same time he announces that for twenty-odd years of casting western features, the casting agents have been "all wet," his opinion is worth hearing.

From time immemorial," says Bob, "the killers in western pictures have followed the stage pattern of being pictured as dark or swarthy individuals. For some reason, the theater has always conned white

School Board Awards Annual Coal Contracts

Bids of Five Are Accepted; Two Teachers Granted Leave of Absence

Awarding of contracts to five firms and individuals for furnishing Big Vein coal to forty-five schools, was announced yesterday following the regular meeting of the Allegany County Board of Education.

Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent and secretary to the board, said that approximately 4,000 tons of coal will be used by the schools throughout the county and the cost is estimated at $15,000.

Five Receive Contracts

Those awarded contracts are the Consolidation Coal Company, George's Creek Coal Company, Jenkins and McCall Coal Company, Ray Athey and Edward Moran.

Cumberland schools will be supplied with coal by Consol, George's Creek and Jenkins and McCall.

The contracts are divided as follows:

Consolidation Coal Company—Cumberland, Frostburg and Eckhart, Elfers, Corriganville and Mt. Savage.

George's Creek Coal Company—Cumberland and Midland.

Jenkins and McCall Coal Company—Columbia street, Maryland Avenue, LaVale, Bartons, Central and Jackson, both of Lonaconing.

Ray Athey—Green Ridge, Piney Plains, Oldtown, Flintstone.

Ed Moran—Cresaptown, Hammon street and Bruce, both of Westernport; McCoolie and Luke.

Two Granted Leaves

The board granted leaves of absence of one year for two men teachers of Fort Hill high school, who have joined the military service. They are Rex A. Bradley, science teacher, and Leon B. Disinger, industrial arts teacher.

Joseph Remuth Pulled Hoax, Detective Says

Flynn Thinks Man Used Robbery Method to Gain Hospitalization

That the story Joseph Remuth, 32, a transient who claimed this city as his birthplace, told police Oct. 3 was a hoax to gain hospitalization is the conclusion of Detective R. E. Flynn of the city police.

Remuth was found beside the road on Piedmont avenue at the intersection of Shriver street Oct. 3 at 8:30 p. m. by Detective Flynn and Officer John Powers. He was lying on his back and was gagged with a piece of pasteboard.

The man told police that he had been assaulted and robbed by three unidentified negroes. His pocketbook was found nearby empty except for a medical certificate and a photograph.

Saying that he could not walk, the man was taken to Allegany hospital where he was examined by a physician who said he was suffering from a possible fractured right leg and collar bone.

X-rays taken later proved that the leg was merely bruised and Remuth left the hospital Sunday for parts unknown.

The man was seen by a woman passenger of a bus shortly before police were called to the scene. The driver of the bus also remembered the man since he thought Remuth wanted to board the bus.

"We have had several such cases," said Flynn. "One favorite way seems to throw it in order to get in out of the weather."

"Not long ago," Flynn added, "a man came to the police station and asked to stay for the night. We refused and he left. A few minutes later he threw a stone into a store window on Bedford street and was arrested... just to get a place to sleep."

It may have been just that he wanted some good food and rest or he may have been a mental case, but at any rate there is no reason for the people of the vicinity to be apprehensive, Flynn concluded.

Red Cross Will Meet Oct. 20; Home Nursing Classes Form Oct. 29

Plans for the annual Roll Call, scheduled to open on Armistice day, November 11, will be discussed at a meeting of the board of directors of Allegany County Chapter, of the Red Cross, Monday, October 20, at 7:30 p. m., at Red Cross headquarters, post office building.

Women are enrolling now for home nursing classes which will be organized Wednesday, October 29 at 7 p. m., in the basement of the city hall. Mrs. Catherine Feeney Stump, R. N., will be instructor.

Hagerstown Man Injured

Stewart M. Roth, of Hagerstown, was treated at Memorial hospital yesterday afternoon for a laceration of the forehead received when he was knocked down by a car driven by Elmer Abe, of Ridgeley, W. Va., hospital attaches said. The accident occurred at the corner of Baltimore and Mechanics streets.

Red Cross To Donate Anti-Tetanus Serum To Local Hospitals

One hundred 1,500 unit ampules anti-tetanus serum sent here by the national headquarters of the American Red Cross, Washington, D. C., on the morning following the explosion which wrecked two buildings on North Centre street and sent approximately thirty persons to local hospitals Thursday, October 2, will be turned over to the local hospitals.

Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by Mrs. Lee W. Witherspoon, chairman of Allegany County chapter of the Red Cross.

An emergency supply of serum was provided by local drug stores on the day of the blast and the Red Cross supply, which arrived the following morning, was not used because there was no need for it at that time, Mrs. Witherspoon said.

Over-age Draftees Who Are Released from Army Must Report to Boards

Local draft boards issued a notice yesterday which instructs all draftees who have been released from the army because they were over the 28-year-limit prior to July 1 to report to their respective boards.

This must be done in all cases, draft officials said. It is mandatory under the Selective Service act and in some cases the boards will be able to arrange for return of the men to former jobs.

A dairy products judging team of three men from the University of Maryland at College Park will be among some twenty college teams from all parts of the United States and Canada which will take part in the twenty-sixth annual Students National Contest in Judging Dairy Products. The contests will be held in connection with the International Dairy Industries Exposition which opens in Toronto Monday, October 20.

The Maryland team consists of Donald J. Brauner of Hyattsville; G. Gibson Meredith of Centreville; Philip N. Buddington of College Park; and Julian T. Brice of Baltimore as alternate. C. W. England, Prof. Dairy Manufacturing at the university will accompany the team as coach.

Board No. 3 lists two men of their registration as being discharged so far. They are Harold Shuck, of 610 Washington street; and Jack Kilroy, of 424 Greene street.

TOOTHPICK ARCHITECTURE—James H. Rankin, 41, of Borden Mines, is shown seated in a wheel chair, with some outstanding miniature productions which he has fashioned out of toothpicks. Rankin, crippled for life by a fall of rock in a Midlothian mine in 1934, built a ferris wheel, left, containing twenty-two seats, and a swing with sixteen seats, in sixteen days. He used 5,300 toothpicks for the two jobs. Shown on the lower left is a section of an artistic fence which "Jim" built six years ago for a Christmas tree yard. The fence was constructed from dynamite boxes and the wooden balls are carved right in the posts with a penknife. The ferris wheel and swing are set in motion with the aid of an electric fan, adding a real carnival like touch to the surroundings. Rankin does all his work from a wheel chair.

Other members of the local committee are Mayor Harry Irvine and Clyde D. Lucas, business manager of the Celanese Workers' Industrial Union.

George plans to do a bit of "spade work" in organizing the state for civilian defense. Conferences at different points are designed to exchange ideas and give those responsible in various regions to shoot some questions at him.

The executive secretary of the state council will meet chiefs of the fire, police, medical, public works and emergency organizations around Hyattsville on Wednesday and on Thursday morning he will confer with groups in Westminster, Frederick and Hagerstown.

The meeting with local officials is scheduled for Saturday morning.

Murderous Assault Charged in One of Three New Cases Docketed

The first of six sessions of a School of Religion was held tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. in the Zion church school rooms, North Mechanic street. Two other sessions will be held on the following Thursdays and the last three sessions are scheduled for St. Mark's church, corner Park and Harrison streets.

Toothpicks are good for other purposes than picking the teeth is the opinion of James H. Rankin, 41, crippled miner of Borden Mines and he is proving it these days by fashioning miniature structures out of the "lumber" which restaurant patrons usually stock up on as they make their exit.

"Jim," as he is familiarly known by his many friends, suffered a grave misfortune on June 31, 1934 when he was buried beneath a fall of rock in a Midlothian mine and made a cripple for the rest of his life.

Three courses will be offered. "Personal Religious Living," to be taught by Rev. Fred E. Grove; "The Life and Teachings of Paul," by Rev. A. W. VonKaske, and "How to Understand Our Pupils," by Rev. Alfred L. Creager. The courses will be offered simultaneously and each class session will be one hour in length. Upon completion of the school, certificates will be issued to those who have attended.

This is the second year in which the school has been sponsored by the two churches. The courses offered are taken from the standard curriculum of the International Council of Religious Education.

Proud of his handiwork are a miniature swing and a ferris wheel which he constructed out of thousands of toothpicks held together by glue. Both miniature structures are placed in operation with the aid of an electric fan blowing on them and all that is needed is a music box to give it a carnival-like atmosphere.

Uses 5,300 Toothpicks

The swing, which stands twenty inches high, contains sixteen seats, contains 1,800 toothpicks held together by the contents of three large tubes of glue. The ferris wheel, a real work of art, is built of 3,500 toothpicks put together with the aid of seven large clips. The first of six sessions of a School of Religion was held tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. in the Zion church school rooms, North Mechanic street. The cases of three more persons against whom indictments were returned by the grand jury were docketed yesterday in circuit court.

Stewart Flanagan was indicted for assault with intent to murder; James Moyer for sodomy; and Kenneth A. Feight for sale and possession of alcoholic beverages without a license. The Flanagan case brings to five the total of assault with intent to murder indictments.

The grand jury, meanwhile, continued its probe of the North Central street explosion of October 2, examining nearly a dozen witnesses yesterday, including City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer.

Court attaches said the investigating body will resume the probe today in an effort to determine if criminal negligence was involved in the blast, which fatally injured three persons.
